

Doctor of Philosophy in Journalism and Mass Communications

Graduation requirements and regulations for every academic program are provided in this catalog; however, this catalog is for informational purposes only and does not constitute a contract. Degree and program requirements and course descriptions are subject to change.

In most cases, you will use the catalog of the year you entered KU (see your advisor for details). Other years' catalogs» (<https://catalog.ku.edu/archives/>)

Admission

KU Graduate Admission Standards. Regular admission requires a bachelor's degree and a grade-point average of at least a B (3.0 on a 4.0 scale), from KU or from another regionally accredited institution or foreign university with substantially equivalent bachelor's degree requirements. The bachelor's degree is not acceptable if it contains credit awarded for work experience that was not directly supervised by faculty members of an accredited university or not evaluated in units that identify the academic content.

Journalism School Requirements

- Master's degree or equivalent with at least a 3.5 GPA on a 4.0 scale.
- Graduate application: Apply online at <http://www.graduate.ku.edu/> (<http://graduate.ku.edu/application-process/>).
- Application fee (nonrefundable).
- Resume or CV.
- An official transcript from the undergraduate degree-granting institution AND all previous graduate credit, including the master's degree, sent electronically to the Graduate Application Processing Center. A hard copy is acceptable if the institution cannot send electronic transcripts.
- Examples of research and scholarship. Links to online articles are acceptable.
- Candidates will be required to answer a survey in their application related to their research focus area.
- 3 references, including one from the master's advisor.
- Students whose native language is not English must follow the policy for English Proficiency Requirements for Admission to Graduate Study. (<http://policy.ku.edu/graduate-studies/english-proficiency-international-students/?num1.5>)
- International students are required to submit evidence of financial support.

In exceptional cases, students with a bachelor's degree may be admitted for the full 46-hour program.

Financial support

The School provides up to six semesters of financial support for Ph.D. students. The generous support package includes:

- Graduate Teaching Assistantship.
- Minimum salary of $24,084 paid bi-weekly over nine months, paid through normal university payroll with customary deductions.
- Newly admitted students will receive a $1,000 new student award.
- Assistance paying for insurance. You will receive the university's 75 percent contribution toward health insurance coverage, if you need it.
- 100 percent tuition waiver for fall and spring semesters.
- In their third year, doctoral students will receive a $1,000 research award.

Contact Associate Dean Hyunjin Seo (hseo@ku.edu) and Graduate Program Coordinator Jammie Johnson (jamjohn@ku.edu) for more information or to express interest in the Ph.D. program.

Admission Deadline. For fall admission, the deadline for materials is December 1.

The William Allen White School of Journalism and Mass Communications offers the Ph.D. degree, beginning fall 2012. The school has a solid reputation based in the profession and our faculty study issues and uses of real-world media communications. We seek junior colleagues who share those interests.

Our Ph.D. program is small and, therefore, selective. We admit 4 to 6 students per year to ensure close work with the faculty. We expect our students' scholarly and research interests to intersect with those of our faculty.

The school's Ph.D. is a rigorous scholarly research degree requiring mastery of theory and methodology. We expect our Ph.D. program graduates to possess advanced knowledge in the following areas necessary for all scholarship in the discipline:

- Scholarly inquiry and methods of discovery;
- Current theory and research methods of the discipline;
- Statistics appropriate to the discipline;
- Media use by society, historical and current;
- Media roles in society, including issues of diversity;
- The First Amendment, legal and ethical issues of the discipline.

Additionally, we expect our Ph.D. program graduates to possess advanced knowledge in one or more of the following areas as necessary for scholarship in their chosen area of expertise and with the advice and guidance of their respective faculty advisors:

- Advanced practice of theory, methods and concepts in the student's area of journalism expertise;
- Advanced practice of theory, methods and concepts suitable to the student's area of concentration;
- Advanced statistics;
- Specific uses and impacts of media, such as in healthcare delivery, in education, in politics, in the military, or in traditional mass media roles;
- The business of the media, historical and current;
- Innovation and entrepreneurship.

The Ph.D. program requires a total of 46 course credit hours (7 three-hour core journalism courses and a one four-hour statistics class with a lab), a one-hour pro-seminar (JMC 901) each fall semester, a 12-hour concentration outside the journalism school plus dissertation hours, which are variable. 40 course hours are prescribed; the others (six credits) are journalism electives.

Students who hold a master's in journalism may have this 46-hour requirement adjusted (a maximum of 6 credits) due to prior course work, leaving 40 hours for completion of the degree. The student completes study of appropriate research skills, designed in consultation with the faculty advisor. The student also must meet KU's requirements for dissertation hours.

At the completion of this program, students will be able to:

- Critically apply social science and humanities theories to address fundamental questions in their primary area of research.
- Collect, analyze, and interpret original data for research of significance in the discipline.
- Critically assess major ethical issues related to social science research and adhere to principles of ethics throughout the research process.
- Interact productively with people from diverse backgrounds with integrity and professionalism in research, teaching and service.
- Demonstrate skills in oral and written communication sufficient to present at academic conferences and publish in peer-reviewed publications.
- Successfully apply instructional strategies in college teaching GTA or instructor of record.