Teaching Requirement

One year (two semesters) of GTA teaching required; semesters need not be consecutive.

Research Skills & Responsible Scholarship Requirement

The university requires that every doctoral student have training in responsible scholarship and research skills pertinent to the field of research and appropriate to the doctoral level. This requirement must be met before attempting the comprehensive oral exam. For French doctoral students, this requirement is met by the following:

- FREN 704
- FREN 720
- Proficiency in a second language, which can be a second Romance language, Latin, Greek, German, Arabic, or another language pertinent to the student's career path and approved by the faculty. (Students specializing in medieval or Renaissance literature are strongly encouraged to take Latin. Students specializing in Francophone Studies are strongly encouraged to take Arabic, Wolof, or Haitian Creole.) Proficiency may be demonstrated by completion of the fourth-semester course (or equivalent) or by examination.
- Departmental new graduate student orientation, held each Fall semester during the week prior to the first instructional week of classes.

Comprehensive Exams

A successful written and oral comprehensive exam, which will be based on a portfolio containing the following items:

- The 3 reading lists, highlighting which works have already been read
- Prospectus draft and bibliography
- Website. The website will include a professional profile, a CV, and pedagogical materials
- A research paper that has been published or is publishable

Doctoral Dissertation

A dissertation prospectus should clearly state the topic of the proposed research and what questions and problems the work proposes to address and answer. Since the dissertation must be an original contribution to the discipline of French and Francophone studies, the prospectus should make clear how the proposed work develops, challenges, or departs from previously published research. It should demonstrate that the student has a sufficient and critical command of the literature and the present state of the field. A tentative outline of chapters should provide some sense of the work's overall plan and structure. Finally, the prospectus should include a substantial bibliography.

When the dissertation has been approved by the dissertation committee, the final examination (or defense) may take place. The dissertation is accepted or rejected (or accepted subject to revision) by a majority of the faculty members on this five-person committee. At least three weeks prior to the scheduled defense, the candidate must provide copies of the dissertation in essentially final form (and the dissertation abstract) to members of the committee. At the final examination, questions and discussion will normally center on the dissertation, but may also range beyond it, to related material, to the general literary area or genre, etc.
