

Interdisciplinary Education Programs

The School of Education and Human Sciences has programs that prepare students for careers in education, education-related fields, health professions, human science professions, and sport management. The school offers an interdisciplinary minor in Education Studies. The Education Studies minor provides students from any undergraduate major the opportunity to understand the education system at all levels. The Education Studies minor does not lead to teacher licensure, nor does it prepare students to teach in schools.